ED IBARGUEN LESSON OPPORTUNITIES AND PROGRAMS

Golf Season 2023

I've always believed in the mantra of, 'Getting Better Every Day' and I actively encourage my students to adopt that same philosophy in trying to achieve whatever enjoyment or objectives they have for their golf game. I've spent the 44 years of my golf teaching/coaching career in the quest to understand the best ways to accelerate the human motor learning required to play this game. My pursuit has included thousands of hours of study to better understand all of the physical and mental aspects of golf performance. Over the course of my teaching/coaching journey, I've researched all manner of golf instruction, coaching, cross-training, understanding of nearly all past and present popular swing theories, and capped off this effort by learning directly from some of the greatest coaches of our time. As a result of my teaching/coaching journey, I've adopted and utilized the best information from my study to develop my own teaching/coaching philosophy and methodology that centers around two overarching principles.

1) Teaching People not Golf: No two people are the same 'one-size-fits-all' can't work for everyone. I strive to clarify key game/swing concepts as they pertain to your game. This eliminates confusion so you can then begin to 'know and feel' what you should be doing - especially when practicing and playing away from your coach. Simplifying a complex motor activity makes learning easier and when applied to a sport where the performance interval takes less than two seconds, it is essential. Within that framework full consideration is given to your individual body type, physical abilities, your available time to practice, and specifically centered around what you want to achieve through our time together on the lesson tee/golf course in order to help you play the best golf of your life. 2) Let's make learning FUN! Golf is a 'sport/game' and if it's not fun, it's simply not worth doing. Discovering how to enjoy developing your mental and physical skills to play the game while you pursue your golfing goals (whether for pure recreation or high-level competition) is pivotal. The more fun you are having, the more time you will spend in the process of learning.

Lessons are given within a private teaching area on the Duke University Golf Club practice range and on the University golf course. As needed, I use the world's best assessment ball flight monitor technology, video software systems and communicate this information in a simple to understand fashion. Lessons may be arranged by calling 919.681.6161.
