Chad Gibbs Lesson Opportunities and Programs

Golfers are frustrated with tips from friends or family, articles from golf magazines, many lessons from indoor simulators, or endless “gems” on YouTube or Instagram. My main goal is to help you properly interpret the golf lessons that you have taken in the past or the current explosion of information that you are encountering daily. My philosophy comes from playing other sports, playing D1 college golf, and over 22 years of teaching golf at a high level. Each golfer can channel his or her inner athlete and former experiences to enjoy and learn this game. Dr. Mark Bull said, “In order to be a better coach, you must be a better student.” I truly enjoy playing golf and I am always working to improve my own game. Always pursuing the ‘Getting Better Every Day’, I successfully accomplished PGA of America Certification in teaching. The tools and technology I utilize: FLIGHTSCOPE Xi Tour Radar and Hackmotion to gauge 3D Wrist Data. I was recently recognized by the Golf Magazine Top 100 as a Teacher to Watch ‘24/25.

I hail from Cleveland, OH and is most proud of being a husband to Durham native, Leah, and father to their two daughters.

I am an avid learner, especially in the fields of biomechanics, mindset, and strategic efficiency. I am on a personal quest to become the best teacher/coach I can be. I have coached and consulted competitive junior tournament players, elite college golfers, and professional tour players on the: Hooters, Canadian, Latin America, Korn Ferry, and PGA Tour. My strength is communicating complex scientific information into applicable concepts leading to lower scores. Some of my closest mentors include Duke’s own Top 100 Teacher, PGA Master Professional and Director of Golf and PGA Master Professional, Ed Ibarguen; Sports Psychologist; Dr. Bhrett McCabe; PGA Head Professional Phil Leddy; as well as another Top 100 Teacher, Joe Plecker.

Lessons conducted within a private teaching area on the Duke University practice range. In addition, when advisable and available, the Duke University Golf Course will be utilized for skill development.
