PGA Associate Professional Bio:

Nanu Mohan is a PGA Assistant Professional at Duke University Golf Club. A former Division I golfer at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, he has firsthand knowledge on what it takes to achieve success as a competitive player.

Nanu enjoys coaching all experience levels from raw beginners to advanced players. His teaching philosophy is centered upon the belief that every golfer is different and therefore should be coached as a person with individual physical characteristics and golfing experience.

Nanu will assess your current strengths and weaknesses, then develop a game improvement plan based upon the combination of your unique golfing background, individual golfing goals, and available time to practice. His teaching goal is always to provide a learning environment where the student can relax, have fun, and attain the basic skills required to enjoy playing the game.

He is being mentored by PGA Hall of Famer and Golf Magazine Top 100 Instructor, Ed Ibarguen, as well as Andrew Kiger, PGA who gave him his first opportunity as a golf professional. A firm believer in the Duke University Golf Club moniker, 'Getting Better Every Day', he is continuously improving his technical teaching knowledge and expertise in all aspects to best help his students.
